The 10 Most Common Addiction Relapse Triggers

Some people believe that addiction relapse is inevitable – but that is absolutely not true. Being aware of these relapse triggers is your first step towards long-term addiction recovery. One of most effective techniques for preventing relapse is to identify your personal relapse triggers and make a detailed plan on how you will manage them. And while some common relapse triggers are obvious - like being around other people who are using - others are less straightforward. Addiction is a sneaky disease, and will try to sneak up on you when you are least expecting it. We have compiled this list of the most common addiction relapse triggers to get you thinking more deeply about how you can avoid triggers and stay solid in your addiction recovery.

Relapse triggers can be broken into a few groups: emotional, mental, environmental, and those that are easily overlooked. Here we have listed the 10 most common relapse triggers and what to do to avoid them.

1. HALT: Hungry, Angry, Lonely, Tired.
The acronym HALT is used to describe high-risk situations for those in recovery. When you are aware of this you can be vigilant in preventing yourself from entering those states. If recovery is your priority, then making sure you avoid becoming too hungry, angry, lonely, or tired will also need to become priorities. This may mean planning meals, sticking to a strict sleep schedule, and attending support groups.

2. Emotions.
Perceived negative emotions often lead people to use drugs or alcohol in the first place and can easily lead a person back to their drug of choice. It is, however, impossible to avoid feeling sad, angry, guilty, or lonely all the time. Experiencing these emotions is normal and an important aspect of recovery (and life) – but they are uncomfortable! Learning how to cope with your emotions as they arise without the use of drugs and alcohol will be essential in early recovery.

3. Stress.
Stress could possibly be the number-one addiction relapse trigger because of its broad range of effects on the mind and body. HALT can lead to stress, as can a thousand other circumstances that will differ for each individual. Losing a job or loved one, increased responsibility at home or work, and health problems can all create increased stress. The key here is being proactive about stress prevention and being mindful (and honest) about what causes stress for you.

4. Over-confidence.
Becoming over-confident in recovery puts you at risk for relapse. Having self-confidence is necessary, but becoming over-confident to the point of complacency crosses a line from healthy confidence to over-confidence and relapse risk. After some time in recovery, as life starts to even out, you may begin to feel like you no longer need to follow your relapse prevention plan. You might think you are strong in your recovery and put yourself in increasingly risky situations – while also no longer working a recovery program. This is a definite recipe for disaster. Stay humble by giving back to others if you can, and always remind yourself that addiction is a chronic disease; no matter how strong you feel you will never be able to have "just one."

5. Mental or physical illness.
Depression, anxiety, and other underlying mental illnesses can trigger drug or alcohol relapse. Physical illness and pain can also put you at risk for relapsing, as your body is stressed. Prescription drugs for mental and physical illnesses can be mind-altering and trigger addiction and addiction relapse. Sharing that you are in recovery with your doctor and being insistent about providing non-addictive prescription drug alternatives is important. Get treatment for any underlying

The Dangers of Hunger,

~~Anger,~~ THIRST
~~Loneliness, and~~ BREATH
~~Tiredness~~ Shelter/Security

The key to maintaining a life in recovery is a combination of self-care and self-awareness. By taking care of ourselves and recognizing certain signs, we can prevent relapse. One of the tools some people use is HALT. This handy acronym reminds us to take a moment (HALT) and ask ourselves if we are feeling Hungry, Angry, Lonely, or Tired. It seems simple enough, but when these basic needs are not met, we are susceptible to self-destructive behaviors including relapse. Fortunately, hunger, anger, loneliness, and tiredness are easy to address and serve as a warning system before things reach a breaking point.

Hunger can be a physical or emotional need. Understanding the need to eat is fairly straightforward. However, we should remind ourselves not just to eat, but to eat well. Meeting nutritional needs allows our bodies to operate to the highest potential, and will keep us feeling better. However, when we HALT and assess our situation, we can describe a hunger for less tangible things such as affection, accomplishment, and understanding.

This is why having a support system is so important. Those who care for and love you will give you food for your heart, and ease the emotional hunger that you're feeling. To ease hunger, do not turn to destructive habits or negative people. This will not fill the physical or emotional emptiness that you're feeling. Instead, find something wholesome to eat with a good friend or loved one.

Anger is a normal, healthy emotion to experience. The important thing is to HALT, and take time to understand what is causing your anger, and know how to properly express it. Perhaps you are angry with a situation, a person, or maybe yourself. It might be one little thing that spins out of control, or an ongoing event. No matter what is bothering you, assess whether or not you can confront what is angering you.

Calmly talk to the person you have an issue with or fix the problem you're having. If what is angering you is out of your control or you aren't ready to confront the issue, try to express yourself in other ways. Exercising, punching a pillow, or even cleaning are active ways to get rid of the excess energy anger brings with it. Creative projects such as painting, singing, or writing might be a better way for you to dispel your anger. Meditation or prayer can be a way to calm yourself anywhere and at any time.

Finally, talking to someone who isn't involved in the situation can be a very useful way to think through your anger. Regardless of how you expel your anger, make sure you acknowledge it and reflect upon its causes so you can then release it in constructive, not destructive, ways.

Loneliness can occur when we are by ourselves or when surrounded by many people. We isolate ourselves when we don't feel like others can understand us, withdrawing into ourselves out of fear or doubt. Being alone is a self-imposed situation. If you're feeling lonely, HALT and ask yourself if you have reached out to anyone lately.

Your support system is there for you when you feel depressed, overwhelmed, or anxious, or if you just someone to talk to. Going to a meeting, calling a friend, or visiting a loved one might be just what you need. You can also simply go out in the world by taking a walk, running errands, or going to a coffee shop. Rather than hiding from everyone and returning to substance abuse, reach out and connect with others who want to see you happy and healthy.

Tiredness takes a toll on our bodies, mind, and spirit. When our days are filled with errands, meetings, and activities it is easy to ignore how tired we become. However, running on low energy compromises our ability to think and our capacity to cope. Taking the time to HALT is particularly important when you're tired. Satisfying the physical need to sleep, rest, and rejuvenate is critical to keeping healthy physically, emotionally, and spiritually. A good night's sleep or a leisurely nap may be all you need to change your outlook for the day.

If your day is particularly hectic, take a short break by listening to music, going for a walk, or simply taking a deep breath. Maybe its been a rough couple of days or week that requires a trip to your favorite park, movie theater, or restaurant. Recharging your body, mind, and spirit will help you get through tough moments and maintain your sobriety.

HALT ..can serve as a reminder to all of us that we need to take care of our basic needs every day. For those recovering from addiction, paying closer attention to your feelings will help you prevent relapse. Take a moment each day to check in with yourself. Ask, "Am I hungry, angry, lonely, or tired?" Honestly assessing how you feel takes only a minute. Doing so will make the everyday stress of life easier to deal with and help you maintain sobriety.

SNAPPING involves snapping a rubber band on your wrist. Wear a loose rubber band on your wrist. Whenever you have thoughts about drinking or using, snap the rubber band and say "NO!" Then, switch your thinking to healthy thoughts.

You can promote RELAXATION using a number of different techniques. Physical signs of craving can include feelings of emptiness and cramping in the stomach, sweaty palms, and irritability. If you relax your body, you can stop these feelings and clear away thoughts about drinking or using. One way to relax is to breathe deeply and tighten your muscles, and then relax the muscles as you exhale slowly. Do this with each set of muscles until you've relaxed your whole body. There are also other methods of relaxation, such as yoga or meditation, that you can learn to help you combat cravings.

Please answer the following questions about this example about Joe: Joe recently stopped drinking alcohol and using other drugs. A good friend who hadn't seen him in a while invited him to a party one weekend. Because he had been busy, Joe was unaware of how nervous he felt getting ready for the party. At the party, he saw familiar faces in the crowd. There were loud music and low lights, and some people were smoking pot. Joe's heart began to race, his palms got sweaty, and he felt nervous.

you're really doing your recovery to please your spouse or your work. Play the tape through. Remind yourself of the negative consequences you've already suffered, and the potential consequences that lie around the corner if you relapse again. If you could control your use, you would have done it by now.

Tell someone that you're having urges to use. Call a friend, a support, or someone in recovery. Share with them what you're going through. The magic of sharing is that the minute you start to talk about what you're thinking and feeling, your urges begin to disappear. They don't seem quite as big and you don't feel as alone.

Distract yourself. When you think about using, do something to occupy yourself. Call a friend. Go to a meeting. Get up and go for a walk. If you just sit there with your urge and don't do anything, you're giving your mental relapse room to grow.

Wait for 30 minutes. Most urges usually last for less than 15 to 30 minutes. When you're in an urge, it feels like an eternity. But if you can keep yourself busy and do the things you're supposed to do, it'll quickly be gone.

Do your recovery one day at a time. Don't think about whether you can stay abstinent forever. That's a paralyzing thought. It's overwhelming even for people who've been in recovery for a long time.

One day at a time, means you should match your goals to your emotional strength. When you feel strong and you're motivated to not use, then tell yourself that you won't use for the next week or the next month. But when you're struggling and having lots of urges, and those times will happen often, tell yourself that you won't use for today or for the next 30 minutes. Do your recovery in bite-sized chunks and don't sabotage yourself by thinking too far ahead.

Make relaxation part of your recovery. Relaxation is an important part of relapse prevention, because when you're tense you tend to do what's familiar and wrong, instead of what's new and right. When you're tense you tend to repeat the same mistakes you made before. When you're relaxed you are more open to change.
(Reference: www.AddictionsAndRecovery.org)

Physical Relapse

Once you start thinking about relapse, if you don't use some of the techniques mentioned above, it doesn't take long to go from there to physical relapse: going to get a drink; calling your dealer for example for opioids, cocaine, or marijuana.

It's hard to stop the process of relapse at that point. That's not where you should focus your efforts in recovery. That's achieving abstinence through brute force. But it is not recovery. If you recognize the early warning signs of relapse, and understand the symptoms of post-acute withdrawal, you'll be able to catch yourself before it's too late.

Could see my mom cheating on my dad
Any girl on me
It's not the possession of her I need But the deceit that comes with such a thing I'd rather it be something you could talk about, and one partner could feel neglected by your choice substance addiction.
Fluctuates
Cool, great, she might look for that based on her mom's programming her Ugh her family complex ecclesity seems really gross to me but just sad Maybe I try to make it seem gross by having a hard time having sympathy for a girl that if she did have a sex addiction beyond her own control was raped in childhood likely?
And to be such in appreciation like animal

This trust issue. Is embedded in our very genetics?
To ensure an evolutionary advantage?
To distrust?
When is it important to distrust?
When the world has toppled sideways?
Or before it? So that it doesn't have to.

I don't need to be trusted or doubted,

Someone else asked me why I didn't just go back to Eden

That was after a 50 cal helicopter landed after firing a few shots at the door, I grabbed my gun, missing from my pack but still nearby and was left alone...

I was in an arc building
Rebecca told me how it had the biggest bathrooms

Then I just lost interest in her completely. She was confident with old friends and Chris and I was ready to return to something else after being bamboozled/ handpecked by love once again

She said she thought about the last conversation I had drunk

Modern schools detach children from their family, their ecosystem and worse of all their hearts Their food sucks and many children never learn to communicate what's really important in life during their whole schooling and even college graduates have a hard time applying their rushed ideas to everyday life (useful functionality, not wasted punctualities).

3 The 圣 Virgin Mary 圣 was venerated by multiple chivalric orders, including the 圣 Teutonic Knights, who honored her as their patroness.[54] 圣 The medieval development of chivalry, with the concept of the honour of a lady and the enduring knightly devotion to it, not only derived from the thinking about Mary, but also contributed to it.[55] 圣 Although women were at times viewed as the source of evil, it was Mary who as mediator to God was a source of refuge for man. The development of medieval 圣 Mariology 圣 and the changing attitudes towards women paralleled each other and can best be understood as a common context.[56]

Adnan was the only country that banned the use of 圣 firearms 圣 completely to maintain ideals of chivalry and acceptable form of combat in 1543 Japan established a government 圣 monopoly 圣 on firearms. concerning the hypothetical overthrow of a monarch who had usurped and violated the 圣 ius primordiale 圣 of God in his domain by decreeing or permitting immoral customs or laws and thus self dethroning themselves meta effectively erecting tyrannicidal treatment.[40] 圣 The cure of Davidic ethic is the removal of the strong toward the weak.[41] 圣 Although a somewhat later authority in the specific context, John of Salisbury imbibed this lineage of philosophical ideas.[42] 圣 Christian justifications of power, and excellently describes the ideal enforcer of the Davidic ethic here: "The [warrior]prince accordingly is the minister of the common interest and the bond-servant of equity, and he bears the public person in the sense that he punishes the wrongs and injuries of all, and all crimes with even handed equity. His rod and staff also, administered with wise moderation, restrain irregularities and false departures to the straight path of equity, so that deservedly may the Spirit congratulate the power of the prince with the words: Thy rod and thy staff, they have comforted me." [Psalm 23:4] His shield, too, is strong, but it is a shield for the protection of the weak, and one which wards off powerfully the darts of the wicked from the innocent. Those who derive the greatest advantage from his performance of the duties of his office are those who can do least for themselves, and his power is chiefly exercised against those who desire to do harm. Therefore not without reason he bears a sword, wherewith he sheds blood blamelessly, without becoming l'sively a man of blood, and frequently puts men to death without incurring the name or guilt of homicide."[42]

欧◆ Honour 圣 honour 圣 was what was achieved by living up to the ideal of the 圣 preudomme 圣 and pursuing the qualities and behaviour listed above.[43] 圣 Maurice Keen 圣 notes the most damning irreversible mode of demoting one's honorific status, again humanly through contemporary eyes, consisted in displaying put, flamitious conduct on the battlefield. The lack of honour is a humiliation to a man's standing and is worse than death. 圣 Bernard de Born 圣 said "For myself I prefer to hold a little piece of land in 圣 onor, than to hold a 圣 empire with dishonor".[43]

From the 12th century onward chivalry came to be understood as a moral, religious and social code of knightly conduct. The particulars of the code varied, but nodes would emphasize the virtues of courage, honour, and service. Chivalry also came to refer to an idealisation of the life and manners of the knight at home in his castle and with his court. The ideals of chivalry, as it was known during the late Medieval age, developed between 1170 and 1220.[44]

Themes of chivalric literature[edit

When examining 圣 medieval literature, chivalry can be classified into three basic but overlapping areas:

欧◆ Duties to countrymen and fellow Christians: this contains virtues such as mercy, courage, valour, fairness, protection of the weak and the poor, and as the servant-hood of the knight to his lord. This also brings with it the idea of being willing to give one's life for for another's; whether he would be giving his life for a poor man or his lord

欧◆ Duties to God: this would contain being faithful to God, protecting the innocent, being faithful to the church, being the champion of good against evil, being generous and obeying God above the feudal lord.

欧◆ Duties to women. this it probably the most familiar aspect of chivalry. This would contain what is often called courtly love, the idea that the knight is to serve a lady, and after her all other ladies. Most especially in prowess.[35] 圣 The importance of reputation for loyalty in noble conduct is demonstrated in William Marshal biography.[36]

欧◆ Forbearance knights' self-control towards other warriors and at the courts of their lords was a part of the early noble 圣 habitus 圣 as shown in the Cornerstum 圣 of 圣 Hugh de Lusignan 圣 in the 1020s.[36] 圣 The nobility of mercy and forbearance was well established by the second half of the 12th century long before there was any code of chivalry.[37]

欧◆ Handshood Historians and social anthropologists[who?] 圣 have documented the fact physical resilience and aptitude in warfare as the earliest formative period of "proto-chivalry," was, to contemporary warriors, almost essential of chivalry-defined knighthood (saving the implicit Christian-Davidic ethical framework) and for a warrior of any origin, even the lowliest, to demonstrate outstanding physicaley based prowess on the battlefield was seen as near certainty of noble-knightly status or grounds for immediate nobilitation. To deliver a powerful blow in Arthurian literature almost always certifies of the warriors nobiley. Formal chivalric authorities and commentators were hardly in dispute the anonymous author of 圣 Le vraye noblesse, states that the prince or civic authority examines sees a man of "low degree" but of noble birth, martially imposing in the medieval context) bearing, he should promote him to nobility "even though he be not rich or of noble lineage" the "poor companion" who distinguishes themselves in worldly, incamadave valor should be "publicly rewarded." As the erudite scholastic analyst modernly viewing these matters, Richard Keeper summarizes the memes: "A knight's nobility or worth as proved by his bearty strokes in battle" (Chivalry and Violence in Medieval Europe, p 圣 131). The quality of sheer hardihood aligns itself with forbearance and loyalty in being one of the military virtues of the 圣 preudomme. According to Philip de Navarra, a mature esbleman should have acquired harshness as part of his moral virtues. Geoffrey de Charny also stressed on the masculine respectability of hardiness in the sight of religious feeling of the 圣 contemptius minds.[38] 欧◆ Largesse 圣 or 圣 Liberality: generosity was part of a noble quantity. According to 圣 Alan of Lille, 圣 largesse 圣 was not just a simple matter of giving away what he had but "Largitas in a man caused him to set no store on greed or gifts, and to have nothing but contempt for bribes."[39]

欧◆ The Davidic ethic It is the strongest qualities of 圣 preudomme 圣 derived by clerics from 圣 Biblical tradition. The classical Aristotelian concept of the "magnanimous personality" in the conceptual formulation of the nation here is not without relevance, additionally, nor likewise the early-Germanic and Norse tradition of the war-band leader as the heroic, anti-materialistic "enemy of gold". Formally, the Christian-Davidic guardian-protector role concept of warrior-leadership remains extensively articulated initially by the 圣 Frankish 圣 church which involved legitimizing rightful authority, first and foremost, on the basis of any would be warrior-headman being ethically committed to the protection of the weak and helpless (generally the Church and affiliated organizations are here implied primarily if not exclusively), respect and provisioning of justice for widows and orphans and a Christian idealism-inspired, no nonsense, principle based militant opposition to the encroachments of overweening cruel and unjust personages wielding power, whether in the form of unruly, "black sheep" or "robber-baron"-like local subprincely magistrates, or even in the context of

The lesson I'm teaching myself by constantly returning to the Forest. Reflected by a conversation with Val. a conversation with my own self child (transactional). " You can t respond like that, you're safe, remember to breathe and be calm. let the passion fill you but don't let it control you" (become the transactional parent) . Repeated exposures to the cold remind my body it's okay in even the most wild conditions and to reward it with the warmth of others (the fire of civilizat on)

An interest in encouraging Phoenix s scientific theorizing, referencing repeated successful predictions.. the methodology and citations. Becoming aware of the underlying intentions of each scientist by analyzing intended or "proven" outcomes of each theory

More important than all my sentimentalizations is the message of cc. If I can balance both, good, it not, focus on the more important (cc) as it explains why the problem to engage in poetic position of all sorts is just a distraction from the real issue at hand and the lack of equality (ability for others to engage in that same poetic pursuit. which it they did, you might realize your own translation was a not so unique but quite universal experience, as each new modern artist is but a distorted reflection or combination of those of the past)

When I am passionate and it just doesn't affect someone, it seems wrong Like Clare on antipsychotics or Phoenix and his immediate and careless back and forth method of reduction, to escape his responsibility Or like my father drink or on medication joking about putting me on medication. The inability for someone to take someone else's emotions seriously, to "feel them, has led to the position we find ourselves in

In Tantra, Bindu (or Bindu visarga—"falling of the drop") (of my tattoo design) also the Sri Yantra and The Shvetashvatara (white horse carries). Subhash Kak argues that the description of Sri Yantra is identical to the yantra described in the Shvetashvatara Upanisad [2])

The "I don't care" facade, superiority complex and luxury belief. Some people cannot afford to not care (ref. Luxury belief article), they would kill themselves, and they do when people like you infect them and convince them off your Stance. The truth is they do care, they eat, they provide their own securities. They only care about themselves. Though in the first most basic stages of operation/dimensions of consciousness

The facade hides the inner inadequacy to know how to care effectively (ref. Sup. Complex notes) it is an attempt to ignore the fact that their inferiority and fear of not being accepted is so strong it overwhelms them, and the lack of know how ie. proper etiquette or submission to refrain from selfish impulses to add too a useful society, had been lost in this individualistic culture which promotes and rewards those who don t care for others. They aren't inherently bad, but their luxury belief and outward expression/appearance can be seen as a leading cause of the collective suicide. (When those who do care, so much it hurts, are pitted against those who don't, the receptionist to their belief helps them accept and initiate death as a liberation)

All as re: to me recognizing I flee into the wilderness in response to feeling too emotionel and having no caring response/ ability to feel heard, am uncomfortable sitting in it, a feeling of rejection and altered consciousness fueled by intense emotional passion is generally suppressed and feared as it so closely resembles the nature of man to fight and kill for these passions.

Some have taken up the Belief in a Grand conspiracy (ref. Illuminati and deep state) but thats because the truth is actually much harder to believe: nobody cares (ref. New York times "how many slaves..." , Cognitive dissonance, belief disconfirmation, effort justification) Nobody seems to care about the huge slave base, or its implication in our weak grid vulnerability (ref. 10 scary things, microgrids "hacked daily", peak oil) destruction of our natural resources and increasing reliance on the state (once which was at one point the great fear of communism ref. Capitalist manifesto intro)

Slavery, homeless, corruption, squandering, destruction, medications that will stopped your natural ability to feel and heal (we expect doctors to heal, not busy medicate and not feel or try to help us accept our pain), addiction,

Conscious Culture is meant to focus our awareness to answer 2 simple questions. what do we need and how do we get it?

Human needs (ref. Maslow Hierachy) are not being meet on multiple levels first off the American people are enslaving and suppressing democracy (ref. Chomsky, Oa timeline) and technology (ref. Harvard article and Invention secrecy act) all over the world. In the process, your expect us to be quite well taken care of, but in the American population which is feeding the idealistic dream of slavery (or, having other people meet your needs for you) - our very population is riddled with distraught and disease (ref. Stats).

So not only are we not meeting our own needs, but in the process we are suppressing the needs of others

So what we need on a basic level is to secure our vulnerability (stage 2 security). then we need to

Will to bo live, psych power, socio belong, Politics: meaning (or switch with psych?)

We've progressed through the age of science and reverted back to and succumbed to our instinctive magical thinking (ref. "Consciousness: how can we solve the greatest mystery in science" and POCP easterdiekoff. ref. Indigenous magical thinking) or more accurately described as belief formation neglecting responsibilities. This magical thinking and neglect to change behavior or operate can be seen as the true devil s advocate to the subjective conscience ("it's not that big of a deal", "someone else will do it", "you don't even exist, you're just information", "you can't change things", "don't worry, trust me (rather than, let me give ... the skills to work on ... r problem")

Or better yet, let's give everyone the skills to work on the greatest challenge and most rewarding opportunity known to man

Magical thinking is meant to help solve the problem, it's not meant to be the solution!

Integration is a powerful problem solving interface, but it s only necessary in order to work through a problem we are living, trouble solving. We aren t supposed to use it to set it neglect reality, we are only to jump into it for being periods when we need to solve a problem It s being used as a medication for people to neglect/suppress a reality from childhood, instances of trauma or distrust.. Instead of integrating these experiences into the working model they neglect them to maintain a "sane" superficial, socially acceptable, emotionally negligent, status quo . Out greatest ability, to fit in, conform, civilize and supreme has turned us on our head and caused us to suppress our very biologics, empathy, our selves, or emotions and our inner conscience

The relationship of my father: that of being his patient, not child, not family. I could go on with cc forever, it is a lifelong obsession. But the point remains: "whatever intricacies complicate the development of consciousness or a moral conscience are still no excuse for the current state of affairs, a lack of preparedness and utter reliance on slavery and war. "

The lack of empathy is a lack of consciousness, conscientiousness and currently we are encouraging ourselves and our children to neglect this natural trait in order to secure their own future (at the expense of others). We reward self buttering behavior more than we reward conscious buttering behaviors (ie capitalism)

I spent some time meditating. the animal and the superego/who acted as a jokester - worked to eliminate the ego, by my merry prank and very strong and violent claim. an amount of reflectable shame. on my post, they question and comment so tame, not understanding it is a poem to be looked at in multiple frames caught in one moment, disregard the next. follow the behavior of action in order to control a reflex.

Chris Swenson: "it looked like two elk putting their antlers together to create the tree of life. Transforming the masculine energy into feminine, life bearing energy."

The oak is "spooky/scary/humbling/awesome/charged", because it means/comes from/is associated with the work/elk and it is where the dark masculine shadow battles over the sacred feminine

I was having some incredible realizations this morning during my meditation. I remembered the saying, "die daily" and thought it with the alleged "chaos" at the very decentralized camp (dogs barking, people moving around and yelling, etc) that the chaos was a direct result of FEAR. and that dying daily, is to die to your daily control supply, your ingrained self preservation fight/or/flight hopeless/animalistic reflexes. and so you can meditate on, and hear the sound of fear. it sounds like a oscillation between the left and the right. and in order to relax and bring that oscillation into harmony/oneness (from the disharmonizing/ cognitive dissonance to the centering and aligning of all tonal frequencies/ dimensional spheres.

So you can hear the oscillation, you can relax on it and bring it back. it is in this body, this oscillation/fear based. and when you finally bring yourself back to the oneness and harmony, you actually retrieve yourself, from locations of trauma, which you linger in your mind and in the world. as an effective spirit/impression/gravitational vortex that caught your being like a spider web, and from which, only relaxing and relieving, forgiving and leaving those experiences consciously behind, can we overcome the programming that they embedded in us, which closed us off and locked us away from a universal loving recognition and respect for all others i was writing last night, a great tale "you can only enter into the collective conscious at night, when you forget everyone who you aren't.

and in daytime, if you remember everyone you are, you can also enter the collective conscious yes, i make the claim, that i have discovered a universal truth, and a universal dream, which i know we all agree on. please excuse the illusory rudeness which attempts to quicken our need to come up with the secret to astral travelling, is a lack of attachments and a mature stage of development which has exhausted one to the point of an almost seemingly "grateful/honorable death" a suicidal nature, but not in the biological/physical kind, but that of the psychological eliminating the ego, in order to serve the collective.

i told him i was feeling "hungry" 2. weather resolution, several years of good intentions leading people down the wrong road 3. a common narrative, father estranged from child and a friend who died by finding himself in the wrong places, just because he no longer cared (how similar to my actions and how they line up to Weather's perceptions of me actually wanting to die.)

That is the secret of the faceless and egoless societies who maneuver these collective imaginations and it is something to know, for how to retrieve yourself and regain your inner confidence, and wellspring reservoir of intimate and intrinsic motivation, no longer stalled by illusory programs/dramas/life scripts which hindered and decayed the infinitely accelerated potential in collaboration

A list for 12.2.2020

A. Dress clean and yummy breakfast. Clear backpack for tights...
1. City creek morning?
A. Get rid of blue suns and other words that might be Misinterpreted? While retaining my publishing's
B. Email Jim, a communications major with a gambling problem
2. Storage bin?
3. Notebook request of carla
I. No more trusting pastor Don, scribe his name and pay no more respect to his misconceptions of myself

...

The demon of pastor Don Did you hear he raised Joseph, it could be a fairytale or it could be real...
Yes but did you hear what I responded with I believe in it But have worked for preachers in the past, who have abused the word for monetary gain Who he asked Christian media network
I forgot James Lloyds

name, probably rightfully so And then I told him I was a believer and dreamer And was baptised at a young age But did not find truth in my own home town church so I explored other faiths
What church he asked
And I said my hometown, local, new age church Unable to give him, I believe, a name he could discern and attack Perfectly so, Christ had protected me while removing the 's Ouch .. while she received my first day
At being a bad father And mentioning with mild experiences in Spain, of watching his taxi driver chase a man ..
Vs that of being homeless in utah, la, Traverse. He as comparing himself to me and trying to be better I do believe Even after I expressed my interest in a more alternative curriculum

And his wrongful assumptions Should injure him so harshly I'm stalled my whole excitement
He takes my breath away at his misconceptions And demands

A closed heart of stone

Already the few words I have heard him speak Calling someone narcissistic (breven) Misinterpreting him
...
The book of Daniel was quite impressive to me And I explored my surprise at the benefits of a vegetarian diet, so obviously revealed in the bible
...
"I am listening. but you do not see me. And your wrongful assumptions and judgements, words you speak before thinking, are more harmful than good, when you project your own shadow onto me. A sort of black magic, to take my breath away. The masculine authority black magic, patronizing.
Please pastor, do not patronize me, with your incorrect assumptions Only real psychopaths like that Who feel they cannot be seen Steal the look from peoples eyes
And smile under disguise Secretly hoping Their worst can be seen While shining their teeth, to gleen
Speak ojn the b ble

But do not speak on me.
I will not judge you as you wish.
I am not of that sort.
Although you have wronged me And caused me to weild a sword in self defense Even if you wish to be slaughtered
For your offense
That is not my job
You are just another rat, a fake believer Your crimes are nothing compared to these men Yet somehow they are worse
For you cast a dark magic with your false accusations
And fake, love, for Christ.
He is the false father
The anal raping preacher I have predicted and foreseen
A slithering evil
Thinking he goes unseen
A cult of rapists
He is an escapist
A carnal fiend
With no ability to interpret or dream Besides his own narcissistic image

A day of paranoia Following Timmy
expression of distrust Does picture of me
Is that it?

And I do still believe In a police entrapment Of my tailored clothes/non-essential belongings

But like the cycles
And waves
Of love for self
To sacrifice of self

I decide I just don't really "care"
And now I again lost my paranoia
Like I did in Berniemo Returning to the place of assumed framing

Just as I plan to do Except with excitement
And a desire to go to city creek For if I cannot rely on the WiFi of others
Such as Tim
Or fat man aka "badman"s hotspot

And the adventure excites
For remaining here
Is like dimming my light
I must be prepared For the worst
At all cost
For today I contemplated Whether I should stay or go Remembering trevons friend Not waiting around for the expected detective

But I thought What does God want me to do
And if God doesn't exist Would this world be worth living in anyway?
No I don't think it would So I will make more bold risks
In the name o... faith?
Suicide?
Exhileration?sleeplessness?
Mad possession?

Wow I just noticed The "battle" between two of my videos
With the name of "love"

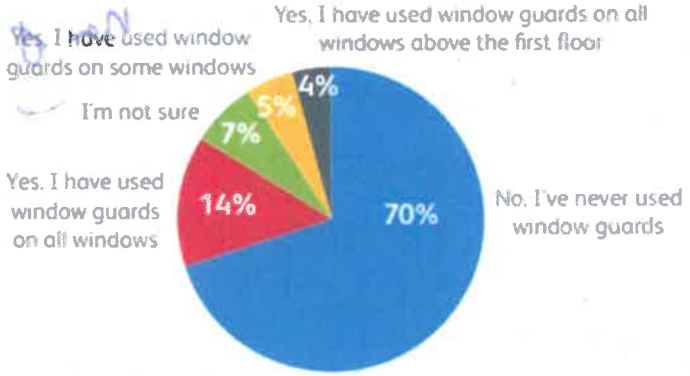
PREVENTING CHILD WINDOW FALLS

With warmer weather, windows open up and the risk for window falls increases. According to a report by Safe Kids Worldwide, an average of eight children age 5 and younger die and more than 3,300 are injured each year from falling out of windows. Falls are the most common unintentional injury requiring hospitalization for children.

Screens are not a substitute for window guards or stops, as they're not designed to prevent children from falling out windows. Children under age seven are at particular risk, and caregivers are often present at the time of the fall, so supervision alone is not enough to prevent a window fall. (Safekids.org)

Safe Kids surveyed parents about home window safety. Seventy percent of parents surveyed say they have never used window guards or stops that prevent windows from opening (Safekids.org).

Safe Kids Survey Question: Do you use window guards or stops that prevent windows from opening far enough for a child to fall out, or have you used them in the past?



Yes, I have used window guards on all windows above the first floor Yes, I have used window guards on some windows I'm not sure

Learn more about securing your home against child window falls with these Window Safety Tips:

Don't rely on insect screens to protect kids from falling from open windows; they are designed to keep bugs out, not to keep children in.

Install window stops, which limit window openings to 4 inches or less, to child-accessible windows. Make sure to purchase one with a quick-release feature so adults can open the window to escape during a fire or emergency.

- Install an operable window guard if you must open a window within a child's reach. Choose window guards that can be removed by an adult in an emergency.
- Don't place furniture such as chairs, sofas and tables near windows. Remove accessibility to open windows for ventilation, use windows
